Mr Pericourt didn't even try to make it look like he was working when his son-in-law knocked on the door. Henri saw, on the other side of the room, his father-in-law sitting in his desk like it was a throne, like God the father.

"Yes...?" he simply asked. "Could you call in ^{a favor} for me with the Secretary of pensions?" Henri asked in a low voice. "Indeed I can, he is a very close friend". Mr Pericourt stayed thoughtful for a brief moment. "He owes me a lot. A personal favor, kind of. [...]"

Henri didn't expect a win so easily. His diagnosis was verified beyond his expectations. Mr Pericourt confirmed it when he looked down to him.

"What is it about? a small thing... it's... If it's a small thing, Mr Pericourt interrupted him rising his head, why bother the Secretary? Or me?"

Henri loved this exchange. The other side was going to fight but will eventually be forced to give up. If he had time, he would have lengthen this much appreciated conversation, but the matter was urgent.

"It's a file that needs to be buried. It's about my business, it's lying and... If it's lying, then what do you fear?" Against his will, Henri gave in the temptation of smiling. Is the old man going to fight longer? Did he need a good punch on the head to stop asking and start doing?"

- M. Toby ! M. Toby !

Juliet accéléra le rythme et l'atteignit alors qu'il s'appêtait à tourner au coin vers la rue de Cleveland. Elle tira la manche de son manteau. C'était en geste audacieux. Elle l'avait déjà perturbé une fois en faisant la même chose lorsqu'elle lui avait rendu un gant qu'il avait fait tomber.

Il la regarda fixement, attendant qu'elle continue.

- M. Toby ? C'est Juliet, vous vous souvenez de moi ? (Comment avait-il pu m'oublier !)

Les piétons se ravaient bizarrement autour d'eux. Nous sommes une petite île, pensa-t-elle, à nous deux.

- Juliet Armstrong.

Il leva son chapeau - un chapeau gris qu'elle pensa reconnaître. Il lui fit un petit sourire et dit :

- Je suis désolé, madame... Armstrong ? Je pense que vous me confondez avec quelqu'un d'autre. Bonne journée.

Il tourna les talons et commença à s'en aller.

C'était lui, elle savait que c'était lui. Le même (plutôt fort) corps, le pâle, rond visage, coquilles de tortues au spectacle, le vieux chapeau. Et, enfin, l'irréfutable - et plutôt agaçante - preuve qu'il est la canne au bout argenté.

Elle dit son vrai nom.

- John Hageldine.

Elle ne l'avait jamais appelé par ce nom avant. Elle le percevait comme une accusation.

Il s'arrêta sur son chemin, le dos face à elle. Il y avait une légère couche de pellicules sur son vieux manteau usé, au niveau des épaules. Il ressemblait exactement à celui qu'il avait porté durant devant la guerne. N'achetait-il jamais de nouveaux habits ? Elle attendit qu'il se tourne vers elle et nie encore son identité, mais après un bref instant il continua simplement à marcher, sa canne tapotant sur les trottoirs gris londoniens. Elle a été jetée. Comme un gant, pensa-t-elle.

Question 1

Climate change is an urgent matter and actions need to be taken as soon as possible, before the damages become irreversible. According to Andrew Winston, young people are the key factor if the climate change movement wants to succeed.

50 First, the author describes how young people have always been the center of every movement that brought changes. For him, they are fearless and outspoken and just like Greta Thunberg, they need to make their voices heard because it's their future who will be affected. And with the development of social medias and a 700 24x7 connectivity, that they control because they are the ones who use it the most, it is easier for them.

150 Also, another way for young people to play a role in this movement is by participating to the political life of their country. They can do this by either mobilizing themselves and vote for people who want to change things or by running for different offices and give to the movement the importance it deserves just like Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, young politician, did in New-York.

200 Finally, the climate change movement will succeed only if companies agree to take actions in favor of it. However, according to the author, they seem reluctant to do so. Therefore young people need to put pressure on them. Companies need to feel the threat that if they don't act they will lose the young people as customers.

Question 2:

50 In the beginning of June 2020, millions of Americans went outside to protest in order to get justice for George Floyd. They were mostly young people who responded present to the calls given on social medias. They demanded changes. They want to be the ones to drive societal and political change and they should be.

100 It is true to say that trusting young people to drive societal and political change can raise a few problems. Some people may question the maturity of the thinking that they put on some matters. Are they educated enough on the things they want to change? Do they have the maturity to consider all the sides of a problem and consequences of the actions they asked to be taken?

150 However, we can't ignore the fact that the changes that are happening right now will affect their future. They should be able to decide in which kind of society they will grow up and live, they should be able to build their own future.

200 Finally, we must admit that young people nowadays are more aware of the issues that harm their society. In fact, with the development of social medias and the connections between people, they can be more aware of the existent problems and deal with them.

250 Therefore, even if we can question sometimes the maturity of young people, we can't deny the fact that they are more aware of the societal problems and that decisions made today build their future. And this is why they should be trusted to drive the political and societal change.
